Unravelling The Cyber Supply Chain Risks And Ways To Better Manage Them

Businesses increasingly depend on vendors to support their business services and functions by leveraging the expertise of vendors. This wave of integrated supply and delivery of services have given rise to many managed service providers to leverage on their specialist strengths. Similarly, with accelerated digitalisation, driven by the Covid-19 pandemic, organisations are increasingly dependent on more technology (hardware and software) solutions. The collective hardware, software and vendors form the extended context of the digital attack surface organisations operate with.

The trending cyber-attacks, exemplified by Solarwinds Orion and Log4J vulnerabilities, have increased the urgency of the need to better manage the cyber supply chains. This is demonstrated by the US President's Executive Order 14028 on "Improving the Nation's Cybersecurity", which has rallied the US government and organisations of essential services to prepare practices, policies and guidelines to better address the threats originating from the cyber supply chain. Ensign will share their experience and expertise in addressing the key challenges and solutions that organisations can consider in managing these risks, including the Software Bill of Materials, Asset Inventory, Vendor Risk Management and Procurement Management, amongst others.
